One of the great ways to meet Seoul's history is to look back at Seoul's architecture. Understanding their historical, socio-cultural and aesthetic values is a good starting point to get to know Seoul. The City of Seoul has published this book in English to help you understand Seoul's buildings effectively. It introduces buildings that have an important meaning in Korean history, as well as interesting buildings for foreigners according to the area and theme.

The modernization of traditional houses in each country may be understood as a process by which various aspects of culture and architecture originating from China, India, European colonial countries and international style were assimilated into various forms and elements of traditional houses. In contemporary houses recently developed in Southeast Asian cities, influences of more nearby regions such as South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore can easily be found. Even under such multicultural influences, Southeast Asian countries sought compromises and maintained each country's unique housing culture, resulting in the differentiation of each country's housing style. This book aims to find out the uniqueness of each Southeast Asian country's modern housing through the understanding of the modern housing typologies of each country produced by the process of modernization. Previous studies of Southeast Asia's urban housing were mostly on political, institutional, and economic issues, which can be said to be macro-issues. However, this book focuses on the forms of urban housing, which is rather a micro-issue, compared to previous studies.

(The Culture of Jeju Haenyeo inscribed in 2016 on the UNESCO's Representative List of Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity – First Photo Book by Y. Zin, A National Geographic Diver and Korea's Only Female Underwater Photographer)

They Scour the Ocean Floor without a Breathing Aid

On the southern islands of South Korea, there are communities of brave women who free dive 10 meters, sometimes 20 meters under the sea without the help of oxygen masks. The majority of these female free divers reside on Jeju Island. They harvest prized marine delicacies such as sea cucumber, abalone and sea mustard. These intrepid women are the haenyeo (women divers) and they engage in this centuries-old marine harvesting tradition only found in Korea and Japan. Korea's haenyeo are less known than Japan's ama in the world today. But a long time ago, the haenyeo taught their skills to the ama.

The Korean people have a culinary history that is as long and colorful as the history of the nation, recorded not only in documents but vividly captured in the paintings of the time.

This book, Korean Food in Art, comprises a selection of important genre paintings and documentary paintings of Joseon accompanied by commentary explaining the food featured in the works. It gives a vivid account of the everyday food and culinary culture of the Joseon people, the food set on tables for special occasions such as rites of passage and banquets in the royal court, and the process of producing food ingredients and cooking dishes to eat.

This book explains the principles underlying traditional East Asian paintings and provides a roadmap for better understanding those artworks. In the East, men of letters were the main producers and consumers of art; they equated paintings with poems that had to be deciphered. The author relies on his training as an anatomist and his extensive knowledge of Chinese classics to identify and classify recurrent subject matters and to extract their respective meanings. He translates these objects into a lexicon that can be used to communicate specific messages.

The Pine Tree as an Iconic Symbol of Korea's Natural Landscape.
Lush pine forests can be found throughout the Korean peninsula as the pine tree has successfully adapted to its natural environment over thousands of years. The evergreen pine forests have a different ambience and beauty from one region to another, from one season to the next, adding a unique charm to the landscape. They also look different depending on the animals and plants sharing their habitats. Taking root on solid rocks and staying green even through snowstorms, the pine tree not only symbolizes Korea's natural landscape but the resilient spirit and character of the people, who have maintained their national identity despite many foreign invasions and adversities.

Shin Sun-mi has created paintings brimming with humour wrapped around her favourite subjects, hanbok (traditional clothing) and women. A world shared with fantastical playmates seen only with a child's eyes becomes invisible as those eyes turn to the noise and distractions of the world of adults. The child becomes a woman and a mother's joy is mingled with concern: how long can the child's world of imagination and companionship sustain his attention before he too turns his gaze away?

If you haven't eaten Gope Chong, specifically, Moe Doo (variety) Gope Chong, you haven't lived.

That's quite a powerful statement from a person who's eaten pretty much every single Korean food? ever. You might be a little suspicious about why I'm trying so hard to get you to try Gope Chong, and why I haven't yet described to you what it is, exactly. Allow me to tell you a little story, entitled Gope Chong: The World of the 4th Meat.

This was your world. Your whole life you'd grown up knowing that there were only three kinds of meat: red meat, white meat, and fish. Then one evening, after a round of Meck Jew (or three) your friend says, "Come on, I know a place." He leads you to a small street market you'd never noticed before. "It's called Gope Chong Goal Moke," he says.

Past the fruit stand, the second in a row of tiny restaurants, you find yourself sitting in front of a grill. "What's that?" you ask. Your friend replies matter-of-factly, "That's the 4th meat." For a moment, you don't know what to do. You just sit there, staring, trying to comprehend what you've just heard. "What? No! You've got to be kidding? there's a 4th meat?" as you topple backward off your plastic stool. "My whole life, I've only known and experienced three meats. How come nobody ever told me about this 4th meat!?" you cry in disbelief. "Well," says your friend, picking you up from the heavily worn tiled floor, "I guess you've never lived in Korea."

This paper aims to examine some plausible external shocks that can significantly affect Korea's economic future. It does so by analyzing game-changing scenarios that emanate from a candid assessment of the risks inherent in the global economy. It is based on the premise that it is extremely useful to plan for the less likely events, especially if those events are associated with significantly altered outcomes. These "Black Swan" occurrences are not as far-fetched as one may think, particularly for a country as vulnerable as South Korea.

It is for this reason that the report examines scenarios that might materially alter the policy choices facing Korean authorities in the medium term (2017-2022). These scenarios are analyzed in the context of relations between Korea and China, China and the United States and Korea and the United States.

The approach of the Report is to first examine major "mega-trends" of de-globalization, disruptive technologies, and greater global uncertainty, and in this context of "shifting sands" to build three game-changing scenarios that can substantially affect Korea.

There are three scenarios: A Trade War, initially between China and the United States but with global ramifications; a Troubled China, with significantly lower growth and trade implications; and a Global Meltdown, reminiscent of 2008-2009. We believe there are few countries for which this kind of analysis is more germane than for Korea. The Report aims to hasten further deliberation on the topics of risk and resilience in the Korean policy community to increase preparedness for events that could cause significant disruption to the Korean economy in the medium term.

The Future of Korea's Trade and Business Portfolio in North Africa : A Deep Horizon Political Economy Scan of Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia / Mark Abdollahian (et al.)

Since 2000, Korea's trade volume with North Africa has increased to over $15 billion and a trade surplus of $7 billion. However recent political unrest across North Africa, especially in Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia, could threaten to significantly impact Korea's trade, investment and diplomatic activities across the region. As economists have long established the relationship between political stability, economic growth and foreign direct investment, this study performs a deep horizon scan on domestic political stability in Algeria, Morocco and Tunisia. We use an agent based computational economics (ACE) model called SENTURION to anticipate likely political stability outcomes, scenarios and potential macroeconomic impact. We then offer specific policy and investment advice for Korean business, trade and investment activities in each country, focusing on risk, sectoral and investment strategies given likely political and macroeconomic performance and resiliency in each country.

This book, Korean Language Education: Australian Practices and Perspectives, deals with Korean language education in Australian schools and universities throughout the past twenty-five plus years. The book investigates and examines various aspects of Korean language education with a focus on Australian language policies, curriculum and course provision, participation, pedagogical practices and issues, teacher training, teaching and learning resources, learner preferences and perceptions.

Providing baseline information and presenting an updated analysis of issues as well as proposing directional strategies, Korean Language Education: Australian Practices and Perspectives is a useful reference not only for researchers and research students working in the field but also for stakeholders (policy-makers, education systems, program authorities, educators, teachers, pre-service teachers, professional associations, parents and students) as we continue to work together towards practices and programs that result in more students engaging with Korean in Australian schools and universities and beyond.

Jangseogak Archives Masterpieces is an illustrated catalog of carefully selected objects stored within the Jangseogak Archives. Originally published to accompany the 2009 Jangseogak Special Exhibition, it has been revised and translated into English. Originally based on the grand project of Emperor Gojong (r. 1863 - 1907) aiming to establish a new imperial library, the Jangseogak Archives is now the home to various documents, especially various sources of the Joseon Dynasty, such as the various Royal Protocols (uigwe), genealogical records, rubbings of tomb inscriptions and military records. Jangseogak has also meticulously collected and preserved rare books from the decedents of the Joseon scholar families. Featuring more than 120 objects, beautifully photographed and supplemented by the latest scholarship, the work will be a splendid introduction not only to the Jangseogak itself but also to various sources of Korea.

Bunjaegi or the documents of property distributions are unique sources of the Joseon dynasty that reveals unprecedented insight into the everyday life of the Joseon Dynasty society. Originally published to accompany the 2014 Jangseogak Special Exhibition, this catalog includes approximately 100 objects that demonstrate the hidden details of the social life of the Joseon people, and maybe more importantly, the changes over time. Now translated in English, included in this work are precious records demonstrating how the wealth was distributed before and after the death of the bequeather, and how various actors - members of the Royal family, prominent yangban aristocrat's families, commoners, females and even nobi slaves - each participated in the acts of property distribution. The documents, the essays, and the translations will lead the readers to a new experience and clearly show why the Bunjaegi documents are more than simply wills.

This book, Understanding L2 Korean Learner Errors, deals with errors made by learners of Korean as a second or foreign language at three levels: orthography, lexicon and grammar. This book identifies and describes a variety of high frequency error types and explains the causes of the errors. It further investigates sources that cause errors by employing descriptive, contrastive, psycholinguistic theories and techniques while dealing with pedagogical implications and presenting focused instructional strategies for selected key error types. Laying out the basics for any understanding of error analysis as well as presenting important topics around high frequency error types and a survey of error analysis undertaken in Korean, Understanding L2 Korean Learner Errors is an ideal resource for researchers and postgraduate students who are working on the analysis of Korean language learners' errors. This book is an insightful reference for anyone who is interested in the teaching and learning of the Korean language.

The current book aims to share the indigenous cultural heritage of Gangwon Province in Korea with the world. Though a remote mountaineous region, Gangwon has profuse cultural heritage beyond one's imagination. Most of the stories introduced in this book are based on historical facts. Therefore, it might look like a history book, but it is a story book in principle. Stories of not only the winners recorded in history, but also of the losers remaining in legend. The books were designed to get connected with the passion of people in Gangwon to host the Olympics, and are dedicated to the altar of the Olympic Winter Games in Gangwon, wishing to achieve the universal goal of all human beings, the global "Peace and Prosperity."

The French writer and Nobel Literature laureate J. M. G. Le Clézio is one of the most translated authors in the world and widely considered a living legend of French literature. He also harbors a keen interest in Korea that not only prompted him to learn and master the Korean language on his own but also inspired his new novel. BITNA: UNDER THE SKY OF SEOUL is Le Clézio's portrait of Seoul--its people and its places--rendered with an intimate familiarity and attention to detail that few non-Korean writers, not to mention non-natives of Seoul, could replicate. It is a story of life in the city as it is being lived today.

What is Morality?

Is the definition of good and evil something arbitrarily determined by someone?

Does morality vary along with areas, cultures, and eras?

Does morality, after all, have any common principle?

Do studies of morality, such as moral philosophy and ethics, end up in mere descriptions of different, miscellaneous moral systems?

If your child questions like “Can homicide be condoned in capital punishment?”, can you provide a proper and sufficient answer as a parent?

Religion – Buddhism

Enlightenment and History : Theory and Praxis in Contemporary

Buddhism / Venerable Hyun-Eung (Translator) Chang-Seong Hong & Sun

Kyeong Yu

Seoul: Bulkwang Publishing, 2017

384p.

9788974793470

Venerable Hyun-Eung's Enlightenment and History is the first book of Buddhist philosophy of history published in South Korea; possibly the first of its kind in the world. In this book of telling points and clear visions, Hyun-Eung discusses East Asian Buddhist traditions in light of Western-philosophical perspectives and presents his views on the theory and praxis in contemporary Buddhism in a way that Western readers can easily understand. East Asian Buddhist philosophy has had little introduction to English-speaking societies compared with the philosophies of other traditions in Buddhism. This book provides penetrating insight into such major issues of East Asian Mahayana Buddhism as enlightenment, compassion, emptiness, and sudden enlightenment in the Zen traditions. Hyun-Eung's approach is creative, clear, logical, and methodologically modernized. Hyun-Eung's Buddhist philosophy of history is not a mere product of armchair philosophy. He wrote most essays in this book during the 1980 s while South Korea was undergoing serious political turmoil as it tried to overthrow a government backed by military generals. This book presents a philosophy that evolved from his contemplations on the real issues of South Korean society. Defining the ideal form of life as the life of bodhisattva in Mahayana Buddhism, Hyun-Eung summarizes the theme of this book as follows: My book Enlightenment and History is a collection of essays that interpret Buddhist doctrines under a new light. In particular, this book interprets bodhisattva as the combination of bodhi (enlightenment) and sattva (life, history), and defines the life of bodhisattva as enlightenment s becoming history and history s becoming enlightenment. This is the representative of all the new interpretations in this book. Also, I classify the issue of fact judgments on how to understand facts and phenomena as the area of bodhi (enlightenment) and the issue of value judgments on how to live life as the area of sattva (history), and thereby I make their logical differences clear. However, at the same time, I claim that harmonizing these two areas into one area of life is the model of a nice and practical life, which is the bodhisattva that Mahayana Buddhism praises.

South Korea is a country that has experienced rapid social changes, beginning with economic development. [...] Economic transformation invariably caused widespread social and political changes as well. Korean society has been profoundly reshaped in the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries, with many of these changes still ongoing. In the political sphere, civic groups are exerting increasing influences on the political processes of the nation s politics. Socially, one of the most important changes is the rapid aging of the population, which has been brought on by the increase in life expectancy and the record-low fertility rate. Another significant social change has been the making of multicultural Korea, as the number of foreigners residing in Korea has reached the 1.7 million mark or 3.4 percent of the total population in 2015. The phenomenon of Hallyu or the Korean Wave, which refers to the rise in the popularity of Korean popular culture in many parts of the world, has also been a significant change for the country.

Investment in labor issues is investment in people and their future

Let us strive for a society in which hard work is respected and hardworking people are happy

I sincerely hope that the SMG's labor policy initiatives, such as reduced work hours, living allowances for young jobseekers, emotional labor regulations, and employee representatives, will shape and lead the public discourse on labor issues in Korea. Sustainable and successful labor policy measures can come about only through a society-wide structure of discourse in which diverse stakeholders can participate. An ideal government not only enacts and implements good policies for citizens, but should also seek and garner citizens' consensus by setting a good example itself. Seoul has now set out to transform into a society where workers are respected and appreciated.

The prospects of this endeavor will only become stronger and brighter when the SMG listens attentively to the diverse voices and concerns of the civil society at large. – Introduction

Riding the subway, pulling into a new station, we've all had the thought: What if I just got off here? What's up there? SEOUL SUB-URBAN seeks to answer those questions, visiting subway stations across the Korean capital and looking at the surrounding areas from a perspective that combines the fresh eyes of an outsider with the understanding of longtime resident. It travels to traditional markets, ancient historical sites, Industrial zones, and the city's hippest neighborhoods, en route introducing the market vendors, blacksmiths, and artists that make Seoul so fascinating. There's no end to what you can discover here. All you have to do is get off the train.

Re-establishing Seoul as One of the Greatest Cities on Earth From A to Z about the Policies Transforming Seoul, Shaped with and by Citizens. "This book consists of five chapters. Chapter 1 outlines the SMG's achievements, with Mayor Park at the helm, in the areas of the social economy, economic infrastructure development, and tourism under the vision of "creating sustainable and secure jobs." Chapter 2 discusses the SMG's achievements over the recent years in welfare, women's issues, and labor policies as matters of citizens' rights rather than privileges. Chapter 3, entitled "Urban Planning for the Next Century: Putting Human Beings First," summarizes the SMG's achievements in the areas of urban planning, urban renewal, safety, transportation, pedestrian convenience, and environmental protection. Chapter 4 discusses the SMG's achievements in housing, education, culture, the environment, and civilian exchange between South and North Korea, emphasizing the paramount importance of investing in people. Chapter 5, maintaining communication as the start of change, sums up the philosophy underlying policymaking at the Park administration across the areas of social innovation, public innovation, local self-government, and communication and co-governance." — Preface
