Mystic Expression by Sadequain : An Odyssey to Exaltation with Ghalib, Iqbal, Faiz and Sadequain / Dr. Salman Ahmad
Lahore: Topical Printers, 2011
Second Publication, Limited Edition
234p.
1453637621; 9781453637623
$ 150.00 / HB
2200gm.

This book is the first of its kind, which presents a collection of Sadequain's illustrations and interpretations based on the select poetry of Ghalib, Iqbal and Faiz. The extraordinary collection of 53 illustrative paintings and two large murals by Sadequain included in this book represents a confluence of the most extraordinary talent of the art and Urdu literature. The verses that Sadequain selected to illustrate reflect various states of self-realization and consciousness. As archetypal expressions of mystic vision, these paintings transcend our latent susceptibilities. They hold a beacon to the path of enlightenment, guide through the gateway of spiritual freedom, and provide a conduit to transpersonal truth. In these paintings, Sadequain seeks to share his observations, experiences, and interpretations of the truth, and his relationship to the world around him and beyond through the poetry of his choice.

Sadequain is known to have painted day and night all through his life. It is estimated he painted over 15,000 pieces. He recklessly gave much of his works away, great numbers were taken away, and the remaining were stolen. He did not keep an inventory and traces of most of the works do not exist. The SADEQUAIN Foundation has been engaged in exhaustive research to locate Sadequain's murals, paintings, calligraphies and drawings, and to this day continues to do so. This book presents the illustrative works based on the poetry of Ghalib, Iqbal, and Faiz that have so far been discovered by the Foundation.

Pakistan's Economic Journey : Need for a New Paradigm / Fasih Uddin
Third Revised Edition
Islamabad: IPS Press, 2018
xxxii, 272p.
Includes Index ; Bibliography
9789694481760
$ 40.00 / PB
598gm.

Pakistan's Economic Journey – Need for A New Paradigm has been prepared with two objectives in view. First, it should serve as a policy document: suggesting a future strategy for Pakistan after technically reviewing the 70 years' economic journey of the country, and second, articulating and presenting all the concerning issues in such a way that they remain easy to comprehend even for the common readers. In line with the given objectives, each chapter of the book starts with an introduction which explains the important concepts relevant to the subjects along with their backdrop and the contemporary debates over those concepts, and finally the presentation of Pakistan's scenario in the given context. Hence the book is not only useful for economists, but also for the students, as well as for those having general interest in the subject. The book consists of 19 chapters, each deliberates upon aspects of economy such as paradigm for development, industry, inflation, public finance, human resource development, poverty and economic disparity, WTO and globalization, etc. Despite having its individual identity, discussion in each chapter has obvious linkages with other chapters, and this albeit may give an impression of repetition at times, still does not look odd, given the book's overall scheme. The book was first published in 2006. Three editions of the book have been published since then, including a Chinese translated version that was published by Pakistan Study Centre, Sichuan University, Chengdu, China. The statistics presented in the earlier editions of the book have changed considerably during this time, the general trends of the country's economy however have still remained somewhat unchanged. This revised edition contains latest statistics at many places. In addition, the book at the end also contains the graphical representations of statistics over important topics covering the period 1951-2018. These graphs will be especially enticing for the people having interest in updated statistical data. The key message of the book is based on the paradigm that is given in the chapter 18. As a matter of fact, the paradigm not only provides guidance for improvement in Pakistan's economic state, but also for the global economy in general.

Manto observed about himself: The fact is that I don't write stories; the stories write me.' In another place he says 'I am forced to think of myself as a pickpocket who picks his own pocket and then hands over its content to you.' We thank Rizvi Sahib for aiding and abetting in Manto's self-confessed crime. I have no doubt that the reader will enjoy the set of translated stories by Manto in this book... – Ejaz Rahim Mr. Rizvi has all the requisite qualities of a good translator. He has full command over Urdu as well as English language and therefore the reader can barely differentiate between the original work and its translated version. Instead of literal translation, he always finds the correct idiomatic rendition of a word which precisely conveys the sense intended by the author of the original work. Mr. Rizvi's first translation of Mr. Atta ul Haq Qasimi's columns has been well received by the public and we hope that those of Manto's short stories which had not so far been translated by any other person and have now been taken up by Mr. Rizvi shall fill up the void and introduce his genius in its entirety to the English speaking world and those not familiar with Urdu language... – Zafar Aziz

Basing on hypothesis that “Effective management of ideological and religious spoilers can lead to achievement of sustainable peace between India and Pakistan”, the book attempts to answer following questions:

What is the role of spoilers in a conflict? How can different types of spoilers undermine a peace process?

What are the dictates of history about spoilers in Indo-Pak peace process?

Why are ideological and religious spoilers de-tracking Indo-Pak conflict?

What are their motives and drivers?

How can these ideological and religious spoilers be managed for sustainable peace between both countries?

UN Peacekeeping Operations in Somalia: A Pakistani Perspective is a seminal work highlighting the role of peacekeeping as an important tool of Pakistan's foreign policy. This book is path breaking in that it examines for the first time, the issue of peacekeeping, from the prism of Pakistani national interests.

The book has been a labour of love. The author painstakingly researched the Somalia operations (1992-95) for over three years, interviewing politicians, diplomats and military commanders. He diligently accessed personal notes, photographs and regimental histories, archival records of newspapers and parliamentary debates and rare video clips of the peacekeeping operations to understand all angles of this operation. More than anything else, it is a tribute to the courage and professionalism of the unsung Pakistani soldiers operating in a foreign land.

Post – Islamism: Pakistan in the Era of Neoliberal Globalization by Dr. Husnul Amin, Executive Director of the IRD explores quite assiduously this silent evolution of post-Islamism in Pakistan during 2006-2014. The book argues that it was in 1999 that postcolonial Pakistan took consciously the path of moderate Islam, recognizing the space for women, youth, and non-Muslim voices and consequently allowing pluralism to play a crucial role in the socioeconomic development and democratization of Pakistani society, says Dr. Muhammad Khalid Masud in the preface of the book. Dr. Husnul Amin says that in this book, “Islamism,” “Islamic movements” and “Islamic social movements” mainly refer to those Islamic political and social forces that are engaged in their respective change strategies using peaceful and non-violent means.

$ 35.00 / PB

764gm.

Sociology in the 21st Century: A Perspective of Pakistan Society' is a well-researched and insightful analysis of Pakistani society; challenges and problems that it confronts in the contemporary world. This book can be used as a reference book for students, teachers and researchers in the areas of Anthropology, Sociology, Criminology, Public Policy, Law, and Gender studies, Economics, History and Journalism.

The book is structured in four parts i.e. Introductory part, General Sociological Principles part, Major Sociological Theories part, and Sociological Research Methodology part. Introductory part covers the definition, evolution, origin and innovations in sociology. The second part draws on foundational principles of sociology including individual self and personality, society and its culture, mechanics of society such as interaction, socialisation, social control, social institutions as well as social problems. Part three details fourteen major sociological theories while part four explains the research methods used in sociological studies.

This book is a new sociological adventure in the perspective of Pakistani society's operative mechanisms and it endeavours to sift grass of bad from the grain of good through new sociological filters. In this book, the reader will find applications of sociological concepts that are relevant, current, balanced and interdisciplinary in approach.
