$ 24.50 / HB Phan Bội Châu (1867 - 1940) was a pioneer of Vietnamese 20th century nationalism. In addition to his revolutionary career, he also wrote many books and newspapers, and has been widely and widely popularized among the people. According to Phan Boi Chau, Women's rights means the right of a woman, similar to a man's right. But up to the root of truth, Women's rights and Men's rights are in human rights. Human rights means the rights of a person but also a right to be a human, if it is a human being, he or she has that rights. Every human being has an equal right, no one is born a slave. A man is a human, a woman is a human and human rights do not distinguish between men and women. Therefore, the division between women's rights and men's rights is redundant.

$ 12.00 / HB Nguyen Huu Canh (1650–1700), real name was Nguyen Huu Kinh, with other taboo names as Le or Thanh, was granted the title of Le Thanh Marquess. He was a famous general under Lord Nguyen Phuc Chu. He was considered a general who contributed to the expansion of the Southern region by establishing sovereignty for the Vietnamese in Dong Nai and Gia Dinh lands in 1698. Since that time, this land officially became an administrative unit of Dai Viet territory, which is today Vietnam. Within the last 8 years of the XVII century (1692-1700), the Nguyen government made great strides toward the South, establishing an administrative and military structure on the land of South Central and Southeast, at the same time creating the first basis for the exploitation of the Southwest region. Nguyen Huu Canh made a great contribution to all important historical events in that period. After his death, the people honored him as a deity. This book examines the life and career of Nguyen Huu Canh.

$ 12.50 / HB There are two Hmong writings systems in Vietnam at present: the Vietnamese Hmong script is the official one, while the International Hmong script is a newly-introduced alphabet that is popular among Protestant Hmong people. The Hmong people of Ta Phin Commune are increasingly studying the International Hmong script in order to follow Protestantism. Once becoming Protestant, they give up their Hmong traditions and customs, thereby losing Hmong identity. Thus to help affirm and promote Hmong culture, it is seen as crucial to revive and popularize the Vietnamese Hmong script as it is the traditional script of the Hmong people in Vietnam. Meanwhile, information on the Vietnamese Hmong script and availability of its teachers are limited and need further exploration.

$ 19.00 / HB Chế Lan Viên (October 20, 1920 – June 24, 1989) was a Vietnamese poet. He was born Phan Ngọc Hoan, in Đông Hà, in Central Vietnam. He grew up in Quy Nhơn further south, and started writing poetry at an early age. His first collection, published when he was seventeen, gained him notice as a poet of original, if morose, sensibilities. He participated in the events of the August Revolution of 1945, in the Quy Nhơn area. Afterwards, he wrote for a number of journals, including Quyết Thắng (Resolve to Win) in support of the Việt Minh's movement against French rule. His poetry during the war period was highly journalistic and heavily colored with nationalist sentiments. After the war, his writings reflected a return to normalcy, remembering the past and commenting on the realities of everyday living.

$ 21.00 / HB The earliest surviving literature by Vietnamese writers is written in Classical Chinese. Almost all of the official documents in Vietnamese history were written in Classical Chinese, as were the first poems. Not only is the Chinese script foreign to modern Vietnamese speakers, these works are mostly unintelligible even when directly transliterated from Chinese into the modern Vietnamese script due to their Chinese syntax and vocabulary. As a result, these works must be translated into colloquial Vietnamese in order to be understood by the general public. Works written in Nôm script - a locally invented demotic script based on Chinese characters - was developed for writing the spoken Vietnamese language from the 13th Century onwards. For the most part, these chu nom texts can be directly transliterated into the modern Vietnamese script and be readily understood by modern Vietnamese speakers. However, since chữ nôm was never standardized, there are ambiguities as to which words are meant when a writer used certain characters. This resulted in many variations when transliterating works in chữ nôm into quốc ngữ. Some highly regarded works in Vietnamese literature were written in chữ nôm, including Nguyễn Du's Truyện Kiều, Đoàn Thị Điểm's chữ nôm translation of the poem Chinh Phụ Ngâm Khúc (征婦吟曲 - Lament of a Warrior Wife) from the Classical Chinese poem composed by her friend Đặng Trần Côn (famous in its own right), and poems by the renowned poet Hồ Xuân Hương.

To get rid of the inertia of the habit in language communication one can have many different options. Ordinary speech that uses this method sometimes damages the universality of the language. However, in artistic composition, the use of the semantic field transformation method is particularly favored by linguistic artists. Xuan Dieu is a great author in modern Vietnamese literature. Among the "new things" that Xuan Dieu brought to the modern Vietnamese poetry, the most impressive are the language innovations, the rhetorical methods, and the semantic field transformation.

Tran Duc Thao also fiercely opposed the misconception of events in "The interpretation of Indochina events under Trotskyism". Some of his studies in the period of returning to the homeland and university teaching were printed in this Vol. 1 related to the history of the country, to what he called "immortal literary masterpieces", "the genius of the national culture". Most of the works included in Vol. 1 deal with topics of the history of philosophy, including Hegel's philosophy, Marxist philosophy, existential philosophy, phenomenology; the relationship between phenomenology and dialectical materialism. The works themselves in this Vol. 1, especially phenomenology and dialectical materialism, made the name & reputation of Tran Duc Thao in world philosophy.

$ 125.00 / Complete Document of the Communist Party of Vietnam (volumes 1 - 69)
On October 12, 1995, the Party Secretariat of the VII term issued the decision No. 101-QD/TU "to publish the Complete document of the Communist Party of Vietnam, from the predecessor organizations to the present", establishing the Council for Publishing the Complete Party Document.

The publication of this series is aimed at the following purposes:

1. Collecting, verifying and publishing relatively full documents of the Communist Party of Vietnam (CPV) to contribute to reflect objectively the process of formation and development of the CPV; Vietnam's revolutionary process led by the CPV; clarify the revolutionary nature, creativity, great role and achievements of the CPV in the history of national revolution; lessons learned from the achievements and mistakes of the CPV through the periods of revolution.

2. Supporting the CPV leaders draw experiences to inherit and guide the CPV's development to match the requirements of the new revolutionary period.

3. Providing authentic and systematic historical materials for theoretical research, compilation of the CPV history; propaganda and education of cadres, Party members and people, especially the young generation on the revolutionary tradition of the nation.

4. Providing reliable evidence of historical events, rejecting false and untrue information; fight against the claims of distorting history, slandering the CPV.

After more than 20 years, the publication of the Complete Document of the Communist Party of Vietnam, from the predecessors of the CPV until the end of 2010, has been completed, including 69 volumes with nearly 60,000 pages.

The Party document was published with significance and importance in creating public opinion, demonstrating the CPV's spirit of innovation, democracy and publicity.

Readers of this series have felt the panorama for nearly a century about the role of the CPV's organization and leadership, the great struggle and sacrifice of the CPV for the people and for the country.

Young people and ethnic minority communities are not excluded from the influence of the Internet in the digital age. The results of this study show that exposure to technology has both positive and negative effects. In addition to knowledge and convenience, cyberspace has many dangers that threaten young people when they themselves and those around them do not have enough experience to use the Internet safely. This practice requires intervention to increase the benefits and reduce risks for young people of ethnic minorities in Vietnam as the Internet is playing an increasingly important role in their lives.

Mai Trung Lam is one of the first 34 soldiers of the Armed propaganda team of Vietnam. His life was not associated with the resounding feats, which are normally so arrogant that everyone must know, his life was silent but full of pride. He was always present in the most difficult sites and hardship, quietly finished duties. $ 18.50 / PB Vietnam's economy under the Nguyen Dynasty reflects the performance of Vietnam's agriculture, handicrafts and trade industries under the Nguyen Dynasty during its independence (1802-1884). Vietnam's economy under the Nguyen Dynasty was an economy based mainly on agriculture. Besides, the recovery of internal trade activities after a long time the country was divided. Under the reign of King Thieu Tri, foreign trade policies with Western countries had a number of incentives, while with neighboring countries, there were many limitations and complicated procedures. The unification of the country in the early nineteenth century was a favorable condition for the business to recover and redevelop after a long period of recession. However, Vietnam's trade is very poor, they retail Chinese goods for resale. In the countryside, commercial activities were aimed at exchanging agricultural products and handicrafts at markets. This book will show readers a detailed picture of Vietnam's commercial activity of that period, meticulously researched by the historian Do Bang.

At the request of the work to rethink the historical reform process, to serve the current renovation cause, the historian Do Bang (author of many studies on the Nguyen Dynasty), has assembled the writings of many authors in this book. The content of the book includes some issues such as: Nguyen Truong To's ideological reform of the country; National consciousness in the Nguyen Truong To ideology system; Practical proposals in the thought of Vietnam reform in the late nineteenth century; Imperial court in Hue with the trend of national reform in the second half of the 19th century; Nguyen Dynasty's responsibility in the failure of the reform trend in Vietnam in the late nineteenth century.

But the Yen Bai uprising, the event that the author spent a lot of research effort, was only the peak in the early stage of activities of the Vietnam Nationalist Party. On December 25, 1927, the Nationalist Party of Vietnam was born, marking an important appearance of the bourgeois intellectual force involved in the revolution of national liberation. Starting from February 9, 1930, the Yen Bai uprising (simultaneously taking place in Phu Tho, Hai Duong, Thai Binh, and Hanoi) was concretizing the violent policy of the Vietnamese Nationalist Party. The scene of the execution of revolutionary soldiers in the Yen Bai, Hoa Lo, Hai Phong, Phu Tho, Hai Duong execution scenes taken by the French colonial government, became the focus of the press, causing social shock.

In Vietnamese history, peasants have always been a major revolutionary force. The farmer problem is, therefore, one of the top issues that needs to be investigated. This research has been going on for a long time, ever since the Vietnamese Communists began leading the revolution. The poverty of Vietnamese farmers at that time was a decisive factor in motivating them to actively participate in the revolution. We can only fully understand such poverty of peasants by studying their economic and social status before the Revolution. And on that basis, we can objectively assess the revolutionary nature and ability of our peasants in the new revolution period.

$ 55.50 / PB Withdrawal: Reassessing America's Final Years in Vietnam' is a groundbreaking work and tells a completely different story about the war in Vietnam. The famous historian Gregory A. Daddis rejected the long-held myths about the situation in Vietnam at that time. Daddis argues convincingly that the entire US effort in South Vietnam is unlikely to reverse the downward trend of a complex conflict. Despite presenting a new strategy, Abrams' approach cannot make any significant changes to a war that is no longer essential to national security or America's ambition to dominate the world. Once Nixon's White House made a political decision to withdraw from Southeast Asia, Abrams' military strategy could not change the course and outcome of the war in Vietnam that lasted for decades. This book is really a fresh and in-depth presentation of the US imperial strategy in the last years of its presence in Vietnam.

However, the capacity of individual Vietnamese people in general is still inadequate. That raises the requirement to build a comprehensive development of Vietnamese people, including the comprehensive development of individual capacities to meet the requirements of international integration. This issue in Vietnam has not been properly addressed. This book shows the current situation of human capacity development in Vietnam and at the same time proposes some key views and solutions to solve this problem to meet the requirements of the country's future development.

It is seen as a business philosophy and brings important values to the business. Vietnam has become deeply integrated with the world, so it must comply with certain " rules " and one of the most important is the implementation of corporate social responsibility. Vietnamese enterprises in general and state-owned enterprises in particular are forced to meet the most stringent requirements of competition efficiency, labor relations, food hygiene and safety, environmental protection ... However, nowadays awareness and practice have shown social responsibility is still a strange issue for many businesses in Vietnam. Most businesses are wrongly aware or not interested in this issue.

Entering the period of renovation, press and publishing activities in Vietnam have a strong exchange and have achieved many important achievements, contributing greatly to the overall cause of the country. However, with the rapid development of the scientific and technological revolution, tools and media are increasingly modernized, the speed of propaganda and access to information has become rapidly on a national, regional and global scale. Those things lead to complicated and difficult-to-control consequences in the orientation of ideology, culture and public opinion.

Because there are no originals, the later Kieu versions have differences from the language used by Nguyen Du due to the wrong engraving, wrong arrangement, sometimes corrected according to the understanding of posterity. It is these differences that hinder the reader to approach and understand The Tale of Kiều. Researcher Bui Thiet and his colleagues have been researching and collecting ancient languages used 200 years ago (the era of poet Nguyen Du), with the desire to bring a version of the Story of Kieu exactly as original as possible.

During the thousand years of Northern domination, the history of the ancient Vietnamese community is only recorded by Chinese historians, but for many reasons those records are also very flawed and superficial. It is therefore no wonder that after gaining independence in the 10th century, despite many efforts, the feudal Vietnamese government and intellectuals still could not build a credible Vietnamese history in Northern colonial period.
