Many people in the Niger Delta may not have heard of the term “environmental injustice” before, but it is just a new word for an old problem. Environmental justice is based on the principle that all people have a right to be protected from environmental pollution and to live in and enjoy a clean and healthy environment. In the Niger Delta environmental injustice is experienced mostly from the activities of the oil industries which have degraded the land, contaminated the water and polluted the air without proper compensation. Gas leakage is killing many people and continues to have a negative impact on the lives of the people living around the area. The aim of this book is to raise awareness of the issues affecting the Niger Delta region, and to encourage involvement in the cause.

This book is an in-depth study and analysis of the concept of standardization and quality regulation and quality regulation as a legal instrument for the development of Africa. It shows how standardization facilitates trade and economic integration into the global economy as well as the protection of African consumers. The book discloses that whilst standardization is pivotal to the sustainable economic growth of Africa, law and legislation are crucial in driving standardization and quality regulation trends on the African continent. The work advocates for a coherent and dynamic legal framework for standardization and regulatory activities in Africa with a view to harmonizing common rules, regulations, and practices that could facilitate cooperation and coordination of trade-related economic activities.

Law On Prevention And Detection Of Crimes By The Police In Nigeria is a doctrinaire research which was successfully undertaken by the author at the Faculty of Law of Ambrose Alli University, Ekpoma, Edo State. Expectedly, the treatise has a robust research base on which the superstructure of the legal and legislative epistemology regarding prevention and detection of crimes by the Nigeria Police is established. And, this is identifiable from the beginning of the book to its very conclusion, which, as the author remarks, draws information from both primary and secondary sources.

It is common to hear people say that ethics is of little concern to business persons. It is said that ethics is ethics and business is business. This paper is an attempt to examine the relationship between ethics and business, in the light of Locke's moral philosophy. Morality, according to Locke is based on the command of God. He also maintains that morality is capable of demonstration like mathematics. The basic principles of morality are decreed by God and are also self-evident. From these self-evident principles, Locke asserts that detailed rules of human conduct can be deduced, with certainty as in mathematics. The enterprise of business is not distinct from the enterprise of life, because they share the same bottom line - people. Therefore, as in the rest of life, business is required to ask the question: What ought to be done in regard to others? This paper is an attempt to respond to this question and also try to show that unethical business practices are at the root of the ruining of business enterprises.
