This delightful curation of Chinese opera genres showcases the photographic brilliance of Dr. Chua and his team of photographers. Chinese opera was named a preserved art form by UNESCO (was declared Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity – Kunqu opera in 2001, Cantonese or Yueja opera in 2009 and Peking opera in 2010). As Chinese opera continues to evolve with the times, the author hopes that this book will inspire readers to take a deeper look at this intriguing performance art.

O trabalho do professor Dai permite-nos conhecer que a música católica surgiu em Macau, desde os primeiros dias como porto comercial. Um sistema cultural relativamente intacto, que constituiu um dos indícios mais importantes e fundamentais da história da música em Macau. [Este livro] é o resultado inevitável do desenvolvimento da música nos tempos modernos. – Lei Pang Chu (Escritor e ex-diretor de Macao Daily News)

A música católica em Macau, no século XX, é um im-portante trabalho de pesquisa da antropologia musical. Este trabalho forneceu detalhes relativos à história do intercâmbio musical Sino-Occidental e à história do desenvolvimento da música religiosa. Também nos relembra que o desenvolvimento da música em Hong Kong, Macau e Taiwan é fundamental e indispensável para a história da música chinesa. A pesquisa de Dai expandiu o espólio da história musical da China para as comunidades chinesas no mundo. – Lin Hua (Professor do Conservatório de Música de Shanghai e Compositor)
