ISBN-13: 9789988129262
$ 15.00

Phoebe courageously steps in to avert a near-clash between Barbara Fhanuelle, the affluent but caustic-tongued client, and the salon owner. Barbara, driven by curiosity to learn more about Phoebe, invites her home. Phoebe meets two men at Barbara's residence: Felix Newgate, old enough to be Phoebe's father but a wealthy, handsome and highly respected doctor who offers her financial security, a future of bliss and also has the active support of Barbara, and Ekow, Barbara's only son, who is younger, makes Phoebe laugh and open up in a way no one else has done before. But everyone, including Barbara, warns her to stay away from Ekow, who breaks women's hearts.

When mercy came to her new school near Accra, she knew exactly the sort of friends she wanted to make: certainly no-one who reminded her of the small town she had left behind – poor, ugly and dull. She did not realize that true friendship comes from the heart, and that the least likely of the twelve girls in her dormitory would come to mean the most to them all.

Santrofi on National Service / Richard Agyepong Addae
Accra, Ghana: Kwadwoan Publishing, 2010
iv. 190p. ; 19cm.
ISBN-13: 9789988841119
$ 12.00

Santrofi on National Service is the story of a young Sixth Form leaver who was posted to the Upper West Region for his National Service. Born and bred in Accra, he had never left the capital, and to be sent 960 kilometers away was a big dilemma for him. His father, who had refused to allow him to take up a career as a professional footballer, asked him to honour the posting as every citizen of the land should. He took it on the chin and went, and was assigned to teach Mathematics and Science at Jawia JSS, a small village some 19 kilometres from Tumu. Thrust into a completely new world, he accepted the challenge of serving the people not only in the classroom but also with his many other talents. And as he shone in the village, the people loved him and he in turn loved them. And a new life and future undreamed of just opened before him.
