Bwan'noni Kunde is the most powerful financial magnate in Lipeto that even the State President cannot just wake up and poke his fingers on his business empire without proper justification. But Kunde's kingdom suffers a setback when the financial king proposes the jailbird's wife, and goes on an extra mile to hire a professional killer to invade the Maula Central Prison. The sudden appearance of the pint-sized twins, deadly gunfighters, opens up yet another wound in the Lipeto-Maraka saga. But did the arrow from the ghosts' island of Maraka land in safe hands?

Drawing on a wide knowledge of Malawi's history and skillfully employing sharp tools of theological analysis, Billy Gama does much to deepen our understanding of the interplay of religion and politics in Malawi. Those who long for the gospel of Christ to truly shape social and political life in Africa will not want to miss this important contribution to the discussion. It draws lessons from history which we ignore at our peril – may it be read and pondered by both politicians and church leaders in Malawi and beyond.
