[Women run screaming from their village at night, leaving all their clothes behind – possessed by spirits of the wilderness, they climb up a barana' tree. It is but one of the fascinating rituals of the Toraja people described in this study.

The Toraja people live in the mountainous region of south Sulawesi, Indonesia. Their religion is an ancient one predating the Hindu and Buddhist religions that arrived in Indonesia some, 1,500 years ago. It is marked by a dualism in male and female elements, a characteristic of rituals the older people in western Toraja Region, Mamasa, still remember. Three rituals, the headhunting, fertility, and tree-climbing rites, are dealt with in detail, while the marriage, childbirth, and mortuary rituals point to a shift in Toraja, influenced by developments in their physical environment, now devote their attention to the deities of the heavens, while those of the earth are disappearing.]

Architecture

The Past in the Present : Architecture in Indonesia / Edited by Peter J.M.Nas
 Leiden : KITLV Press, c2007
 287 p. ; ill. ; 27 cm.
 Includes Index.

 $ 89.90

[Indonesian architecture is hard to define. Architecture in Indonesia is extremely multifaceted and includes influences from many cultures, ranging from India, China and the Middle East to the countries of the West. The search for the creation of an 'authentic Indonesian' architecture has long been a topic of discussion among architects in Indonesia. In the Past in Present, Architecture in Indonesia renowned authors sketch a picture of the diversity in Indonesian architecture, found in both contemporary and historic buildings in the Archipelago. The main architectural traditions in Indonesia are defined in this book as modern, 'traditional' or vernacular, Islamic, Chinese, Hindu, and colonial or Indische architecture, The Past in the Present offers a general introduction to Indonesian architecture and an intelligible description of the architectural context of Indische architecture. In order to serve this double purpose the book consists of two parts. Part one, 'Variety in Indonesian Architecture', contains a series of essays on different Indonesian architectural traditions and part two, "Modernity in the Tropics", presents pictures and drawings on colonial architecture from the collection of the Netherlands Architecture Institute.]

Art

Indonesian Contemporary Art Now / Marc Bollansee and Enin Supriyanto.

 1. Artists- Indonesia - Biography
 2. Arts, Indonesian - 20th century.
 $ 89.90

[Contemporary Asian art is dynamic, alive and provides a way of looking at what is happening now, whether is Indonesia or in China. This cutting-edge book features 30 outstanding Indonesian artists covering a wide range of media, including painting, drawing, installation, sculpture, performance, video and new-gen art objects. For the first time, it also compares Indonesian and Chinese contemporary art and enables us to evaluate their relative merits and strengths in a global art-historical perspective. Indonesian artists' constructive dialogue with the authors has enabled them to penetrate into the hearts and minds of the young generation.

In the selection of artworks for this book, the authors were guided by the following criteria-intensity, authenticity, sensitivity, importance to the artist's total oeuvre or to the culture in general, and relevance to contemporary life.

The text consists of two main essays and vividly written commentary on individual works based on discussion with the artists, and revealing the meaning and significance of each work.]

[In the past few decades, Jakarta has been growing from a metropolitan city into a megapolitan city. The growth of its multi-ethnic population is closely related to Jakarta's economy and the "merger" of the cities near and around it like Bogor, Depok, Tangerang, Bekasi and Jakarta into what is now known as Bodetabek.

While Canberra, Washington DC and the capital cities of some other countries merely function as State Capital Cities, Jakarta is a Multi-Function City, namely as a center of economic activities, trade and services, tourism, cultural center, and other social activities. This situation has made Jakarta to become like a magnet and center of urbanites, whereas the capacity of its space and resources do not support the accommodation of its population "explosion" which in 2003 reached 8.5 million at night, and 10 million during the day, with a population density of 14,000 people per square kilometer, which in certain places even reached 30,000 people per square kilometer (data of the Jakarta City Administration).]

History

The Sunda Kingdoms of West Java : From Tarumanagara to Pakuan Pajajaran with the Royal Centre of Bogor, Over 1000 years of Prosperity and Glory / Herwig Zahorka
 Jakarta : Yayasan Cipta Loka Caraka, c2007
 64 p. : ill. ; 24 cm.
 Includes Bibliography.

[The author dedicates this strikingly illustrated book to the Sunda people and to those interested in Sundanese history and archaeology. The book endeavors to bring back the spirit of the great history of West Java experienced from the time Tarumanegara Kingdom in the early fifth century AD to the time of Pakuan Pajajaran kingdom in the Fifteenth early and Sixteenth century.

Now known as Bogor, this area of Sunda culture has always been a Royal center of high culture, which provided the very first inscriptions (prasasti) ever found on the island of Java. The book contains 3 maps and 56 excellent photographs of nearly all of the remaining artifacts from this long period of more than 1000 years, many of them depicted in the print media for the first time. They provide glimpses of history.

To allow uninterrupted and pleasant reading, no direct references are made to the original historical sources within the text. Instead, all literature sources are listed in the bibliography.]

Of Self and injustice : Autobiography and repression in modern Indonesia / C. W. Watson

[Since the downfall of Soeharto in 1998 many autobiographical writings have appeared in Indonesia from the pens of those who were marginalized by his so-called New order regime. This book examines representative autobiographies of several such individuals: two ex-political prisoners who describe themselves as Muslim Communists: two writers of the left, one a woman in a senior position in the left-wing women's organization. Gerwani, and one a well-known male novelist who spent years of exile in China and Russia; two Muslim opponents of Soeharto, one an intellectual and the other a political campaigner; and finally, two collections of start autobiographies by the younger generation, one a group involved in social welfare action, the other a group of dedicated young Muslims.

The scrutiny of the texts is in all cases preceded by a brief account of the historical and cultural context of the writing of the autobiographies. In the analysis of the works themselves the emphasis is on trying to represent the implicit tone of the narrative as much as its over contents. Both general and specialist readers are consequently invited to reflect on the memories and experiences of significant participant-observers as a mode of understanding a recent period in Indonesia history.]

[This book tells the story of the contacts and conflicts between muslims and Christians in southeast asia during the Dutch colonial history from 1596 until 1950. The author draws from a great variety of sources to shed light on this period: the letters of the colonial pioneer Jan Pietersz. Coen, the writings of 17th century Dutch theologians, the minutes of the Batavia church council, the contracts of the Dutch East India Company (VOC) with the sultans in the Indies, documents from the files of colonial civil servants from the 19th and 20th centuries, to mention just a few. The colonial situation was not a good starting-point for a religious dialogue. With Dutch power on the increase there was even less understanding for the religion of the muslims. In 1620 J.P. Coen, the strait-laced Calvinist, had actually a better understanding and respect for the muslims than the liberal colonial leaders from the early 20th century. Convinced as they were of western Supremacy.]

[Soeharto- The life and Legace of Indonesia's second President is the biography of a man who rose from a humble farming background to become one of Asia's most important political figures. This insightful narrative traces his life from his birth in 1921, through his long tenure as president to his present life, one that is far divorced from his former days of glory. It also explores the controversy surrounding the charitable organisations or Yayasan which were established during his time in power and their links to the Indonesian conglomerates and his family.

As president, Soeharto was often depicted as a sober-minded and evasive person, making him an enigma to many. With a perspective that can only come from one who has direct contact with the former president and his family, the author offers a rare glimpse of Soeharto's warmth and sensitivity towards those whom he trusts. This book also shows how his faith in himself and his country remained unshaken through his meteoric rise and dramatic fall from power.]

On feminism and Nationalism : Kartini's Letters to Stella Zeehandelaar 1899-1903 /

[The letters Raden Ajeng Kartini wrote from her home in East Java to Stella Zeehandelaar, the 'modern girl' in Amsterdam, are amongst the most powerful and stirring of the many letters she wrote in the last four years of her life. They express both her passionate hope and powerful aspiration to bring about change in her own life, to the position of Javanese women, to colonized Java and reflect the deep disappointment she experienced and the compromises she had to make.

Inspired by the European feminist writing of her day, these letters reveal how Kartini transformed these ideas into a manifesto for the emancipation of Javanese women and a platform for the decolonisation of Java. They trace the path from personal aspiration to the liberation of all women, from a concern for the position of women, to a radical assessment of colonial politics.

This fully revised second edition is prefaced by an historical introduction and a foreword by the Indonesian writer Goenawan Mohamad, and includes the two formal memoranda on women's education written by Kartini in 1903.]

[In this detailed examination of the Indonesian military's image-making efforts, Katharine E. McGregor explores the formulation of nationalist history under Suharto, and shows how this effort affected the Indonesian people. The study highlights the role of the Armed Forces History Centre and its chief historian, Nugroho Notosusanto, in promoting controversial images of the military as a self-sacrificing people's force guarding the spirit of independence and protecting the official national philosophy, the Pancasila. The extraordinary attention paid to image-making calls into question views of the military as an all-powerful institution. Based on interviews, museum records, guidebooks, military manuals, films, textbooks, historical re-enactments and commemorative volumes, History in Uniform offers fresh insights into the significance of history to Indonesia's politicised military and to this relatively new nation.]

[From Foreword :

The 2005 Intercensal Population Survey activity was conducted in two stages. The First stage was the households listing activity in 16.709 selected census block. This stage collected information about household and household members by sex. The second stage was the interview to 267.344 households which had been selected by probability to size from all of the listed households. This stage collected information on marriage status, education, place of residence of five years ago and elderly activities.

This publication is the result of the data collection at the second stage. There are 33 series of Publications : S-1 Series (Indonesia Table), S-1.01 to S-1.30 series (Province Tables), S-2 Series (Fertility, Mortality and Migration estimation) and S-3 Series (Population Projection).]

[The book called "Decisive Moments: Indonesia's long way toward democracy" exposes a lot of information unknown yet to people, which sometimes could become a polemic between the academicians, politicians, and commoners. A lot of happenings, socioeconomic and political facts, and policies B.J. Habibie took in his presidency, are summarized in four chapters.

The book, written based on B.J. Habibie's diary, begin with a prolog describing the situation and crisis occurred toward the presidential succession from Soeharto to B.J. Habibie explained the decisive events around the retirement of Soeharto, and the important cases occurred during the first 100 days. The other chapter presents thematically basic cases solved during his governance, such as the general election and special session of the People's Consultative Assembly. East Timor problem, his idea on regional autonomy, and his position and appreciation about President Soeharto.]

[For decades almost the only social scientists who visited Indonesia's provinces were anthropologists, Anybody interested in politics of economics spent most of their time in Jakarta, where the action was. Out view of the world's fourth largest country threatened to become simplistic, lacking that essential graininess. Then, in 1998, Indonesia was plunged into a crisis that could not be understood with simplistic tools.

Decentralization was often connected with the neo-liberal desire to reduce state powers and make room for free trade and democracy. To what extent were the goals of good governance and a stronger civil society achieved? How of the process was 'captured' by regional elites to increase their own powers? Amidst the new identity politics, what has happened to citizenship? These are among the central questions addressed in this book.

[The tsunami that hit Aceh on the island of Sumatra, Indonesia, on 26 December 2004 was a natural disaster of historic proportions. This book examines same issues faced by the people in the province of Nanggroe Ache Darussalam after the tsunami. The focus is not only on the areas affected by the natural disaster, but also on the areas torn by internal conflict. The tsunami was a catalyst for a new beginning for both prosperity and peace. The authors of this book are researchers at ISEAS, except Kuntoro Mangkusubroto, who is the Director of the Rehabilitation and Reconstruction Agency in Banda Aceh. This volume will appeal to readers wanting a quick sweep of some important sustainable development issues in Ache, a society hit by both the tsunami and internal conflict.]

[This book deals with the development of Azad's political thought, which ran the gamut from open pan-Islamic fundamentalism to nationalism and even secularism, and all in the context of the Indian struggle against the imperialism. The book is divided into three major sections equivalent to three different epochs in Azad's career, during which he elaborated in such concepts as liberty, equality and democracy. After providing a descriptive account of Azad's family and education, the book examines his role in the Khilafat Movement and the Indian National Congress, respectively, as well as his thoughts on the partition of India. In the concluding section, an analysis of Azad's interpretation of Islam will be provided in the lights of India's drive for national development.]

offering them publishing opportunities. Small grants are awarded annually for innovative research on issues concerning socio-political and cultural changes taking place in the diverse Muslim communities of Southeast Asia, especially as they relate to modernization and globalization. Key themes include: popular manifestations of Islam; shaping of Muslim identities in Southeast Asia by regional and globalizing forces; changing gender dynamics in Muslim communities; and the way Islamic values inform economic activities and social responsibilities.]

Hasbi's Theory of Ijtihad in the context of Indonesian Fiqh

[This book studies the proposal for an Indonesian fiqh, articulated by Muhammad Hasbi Ash Shiddieqy (1904-1975) as an effort to bridge the tension in Islamic law between revelation and reality in Indonesian society. While such an indigenous fiqh can only be created through ijtihad, most Indonesian Muslims believed the gate of ijtihad to have been irrevocably closed and thus they vehemently apposed any suggestion toward creating an Indonesian fiqh. To make ijtihad possible once again, Hasbi worked hand in hand with the reformists with the reformists with the call of "Back to the Quran and the Sunna". The reformists program consisted of attempts to eliminate "non-Islamic" elements from Muslim life, to open the gate of ijtihad, to bring an end to blind imitation and to allow for taltiq, a comparative study of fiqh. In order to preserve the reformed law, Hasbi supported his idea of an Indonesian fiqh with a double principle, proposing the Indonesian fiqh's focus on human relations. Only with exclusion of the fundamental beliefs and rituals. He made consensus, analogy, juristic preference, and custom together with Quran and the Sunna. The proofs: of ijtihad, and hence, the sources of law. On the other hand, he made them the methodologies of ijtihad, by emphasizing the collective ijtihad or consensus as the only procedure that Indonesian muslim should adopt. Hasbi also believed that a school of law would develop faster when adhered to by a government. An effort has been made in this thesis, therefore, to relate Hasbi's otherwise abstract ideas of collective ijtihad to the political structures of the Indonesian Republic. This rather liberal interpretation is offered to help Indonesian Muslims hasten their attempts at creating an Indonesian fiqh, and at casting aside the "reception theory", an expression of the Dutch legal politics of devide at empera which has to place in independent Indonesia.]

[In this short study, the author explores Islam as a domestic political variable in Indonesia's foreign policy since independence. Here, Anak Agung Banyu Perwita argues that increasingly Indonesia's foreign policy toward the Muslim world has become based on domestic political struggles. In support of his argument, the author mainly draws on material from the period when president Soeharto's New Order regime ruled Indonesia but brings in more recent material from the post-Soeharto era to demonstrate how Indonesian foreign policy is still shaped by the same forces today.

Containing a wealth of information on the role of Islam in Indonesia's foreign policy, this book is essential reading for anyone seeking to understand how the world's largest Muslim country is reacting to the international challenges of the modern world.]

[Maiden Voyages is a fascinating, unusual study of the centrality, impact and place of sea travel on the lives of women in Eastern Indonesia. It shows how women there travel constantly by sea, to move between islands, to urban centers and even overseas. In doing so, they negotiate and cross and re-make their social boundaries. In contrast to the dominant economic approach to migration, this book uses Eastern Indonesian women's own travel accounts to show how sea voyages recreate their identities. The book is based on research of contemporary rural and semi-rural women in the East Nusa Tenggara province of Indonesia.

This book is an original and valuable contribution to the debates on gender, subjectivity, and the local specificity. It aims to contribute to an understanding of women's mobility and special relations in Eastern Indonesia. It will be of interest to many, especially scholars of geography, migration, gender and microeconomics as well as of appeal to general readers.]
