Economics/Development Studies

Studies on the Impact of Neoliberal Policies on the Conditions of Agricultural Workers in selected Areas in the Philippines, India and Sri Lanka and the Strategies for Collective Actions: Final Report

Penang: Pesticide Action Network – Asia Pacific(PANAP) & Coalition of Agricultural Workers International(CAWI), 2008

x. 180p. ; 21cm.

ISBN-13: 9789839381375

$ 12.00

A Study on the condition and struggles of agricultural workers in different parts of the world, in Asia particularly, contributes a great deal to advocacy and direct actions by peasants. This study has been launched precisely to create that contribution. This study aims to describe the current economic, political and cultural state of agricultural workers in selected plantation farms in the Philippines, India and Sri Lanka, as affected by neoliberal policies and programmes. More importantly, it aims to lay down the strategies that would be most effective at country and regional levels in confronting globalization and asserting agricultural workers' rights, access and control over their resources.

Echoes of Life showcases the rich biodiversity of the Sungai Pulai Mangroves. Merambong Island and the Merambong Seagrass Meadow. The three habitats each has its own unique bio-assemblages and each is represented by a group of common organisms. These locations sited in the southwest of Johor state are relatively not well studied for their floral and faunal contents. This is the first attempt at documenting the terrestrial and marine lives of the three distinct areas as well as the activities of Man, including the Sea Gypsies who have settled along Sungai Pulai since time immemorial.

History

Footprints in the Paddy Fields / Tina Kisil
Selangor: MPH Group Publishing Sdn. Bhd., 2010
xv. 219p. ; 20cm.

ISBN-13: 9789675222511

1. Dusun (Bornean people) – Anecdotes

$ 16.50

Footprints in the Paddy Fields is both a family portrait and a childhood memoir, set against the vanished world of bamboo huts on spindly timber stilts, a world where one's prized possessions were makeshift farm tools and a buffalo or two, and where the dead were placed in stone burial jars. Those were the days when removing human heads was a form of sport, and the only mode of transport was a pair of good legs...

Melaka From the Top / Dennis De Witt
Selangor: Nutmeg Publishing, 2010
160p. ; 22cm.

ISBN-13: 9789834351922

1. Melaka – Description and travel

$ 29.50

Melaka from the Top attempts to trace back and compare the geological and demographical transformation and development of the town of Melaka and its surroundings over the centuries, with focus on its expansion particularly within the last 40 years. Historic Melaka has changed dramatically over the 600 years of its history. However, it was only with the reclamation of its coast and expansion of the town in the last few decades that has truly changed the town. From its once 'sleepy hollow' little blackwater town, Melaka is now being transformed into a growing metropolis. This book records those changes and captures the images of how Melaka was then and is now, from eye level and from the top, as it continues to develop and change.

This book is divided into three sections – “Ricefield Egret” (contains six stories), “Yuyutsu’s Musings” (seven stories) and “Ringgg ...!” (nine stories). The first section presents stories with rural backgrounds – villages and remote inland areas. All the stories here are in the realistic tradition. The second section offers stories – sometime closer to sketches – which revolve in the minds of the characters and can be classified as mindscape stories. The third sections contain stories with urban backgrounds, particularly metropolitan cities abroad like Bangkok, Hong Kong and New York.

He cried. There was a look of regret on his face. The baby was sleeping soundly in the cot. It had thin lips and its skin was reddish, a colour that was very different from that of the other babies. He put one hand slowly under the baby’s head and the other under its buttocks. The colour of its hair was golden. He lifted the baby very carefully and put it in his lap. The Baby stretched and moved its hands. It was obvious that the baby was not like the other babies. He kissed the baby who was unlike other babies.

The poems in this collection, Song of the Pelican, are extremely well crafted. There is intensity in the interrelationship between the poet and his work, and the dimensions of intellect and emotion are carefully balanced against each other. Most of the poems are ballads. Some utilize the technique of a limited omniscient authorial point of view, together with the interaction of various people to convey the poet’s moral intentions.
