Dennis Chiang is a stranger in his homeland. Just returned to the Straits Settlements after spending half of his life in England, the young lawyer is thrown into the swirling brew that is colonial society in 1930s Singapore. It is a society of tuans and towkays, of Babas and babus, where race is everything and even love cannot be wholly colour-blind.

As he juggles his career and personal responsibilities, Chiang encounters a life full of courtroom dramas, cultural prejudices and even communist intrigue. And never far away is his mentor, the unflappable d'Almeida. In public d'Almeida is a calm, efficient lawyer, but he possesses a shrewd investigative streak and uses unorthodox methods that result in his young protégé being caught up in a succession of captivating adventures.

$ 16.00

Set in the period just before the Fall of Singapore, this story – the second in the trilogy – unfolds in a time of great uncertainty as news of an impending Japanese invasion looms. Dennis Chiang returns as the young and eager lawyer at d'Almeida's law firm. But little does he know that his life would soon become a lot more exciting – and dangerous.

Roped in by the British Special Branch as an undercover operative to weed out Japanese agents subverting and undermining the morale of an Indian Army garrison sent to defend Malaya, Chiang finds himself going from criminal lawyer in a courtroom to an adept and rugged spy in the jungles of Malaya. This fast-paced and absorbing tale of adventure and espionage will get you hooked from the get-go.

In its audacious attempts to appropriate the total resources of the theater, ancient and modern, Cemetery Road is a typical Esiaba Irobi play. Playing dangerously between the sacred and the profane, the macabre and the hilarious, the solemn rituals of the African Mask and the exigencies of a drama class, Irobi continues to extend the frontiers of his elemental drama which in due course we can only designate as 'Irobisque'

The Mongolian literary tradition is an ancient one, based upon a respect for and love of the natural world, upon fidelity and upon romantic love. These concerns have remained unchanged up until the present day, and they are all found revealed throughout this book in various forms. From these poems, it should be clear that the swathe of poetic landscape covered by these writers is marked by immense breadth and richness, and reading this book, one can imagine a bright and exciting future for Mongolian literature.

ISBN-13: 9789574453030
$ 20.00

Gao Xingjian is recognized as an outstanding avant-garde experimental playwright from the early 1980s in China. This modern realist play, Absolute Signal, was received very well because of its fresh presentation on stage. For the first time in China, a playwright used special light and sound effects on stage to express the thoughts and feelings of the characters.

This English translation of Gao's early play and his theoretical essay on modern Chinese drama will not only make this play accessible to English-speaking readers worldwide but also reveal the early formation of the playwright's unique theatric creativity and theory.
