Most people suppose that the whole world knows what it is to love; that romantic love is universal, quintessentially human. Such a supposition has to be able to meet three challenges. It has to justify its underlying assumption that all cultures mean the same thing by the word 'love' regardless of language. It has to engage with the scholarly debate on whether or not romantic love was invented in Europe and is uniquely Western. And it must be able to explain why early twentieth-century Chinese writers claimed that they had never known true love, or love by modern Western standards. By addressing these three challenges through a literary, historical, philosophical, biographical and above all comparative approach, this highly original work shows how love's profile in China shifted with the rejection of arranged marriages and concubinage in favour of free individual choice, monogamy and a Western model of romantic love.

Abolim traces Goa's roots through its song and legend. This book does justice in giving a comprehensive overview of some of the most emotive examples from these fields.

Abolim attempts to share with the world an understanding of Goa's song of love, the Mando, its song of joy, the Durpod, and the songs of the dancing girl, the Dakni. Writing in this volume spans many decades from the last century, in a way that ensure it doesn't get forgotten.

In the second part of the book, popular academic the late Prof Lucio Rodrigues introduces us to charming tales and legends that take us back to a simpler Goa. To a world of sons-in-law and lawyers, Brahmins and old women, villages like Moira and Guirim/Sangolda, and more. Yours to enjoy!

In this volume of poetry, Mirrored reflections, Dr. Antonio Gomes invites the reader to an imaginative journey in finely crafted verse that traverses numerous stages of life, contrasting moods, diverse continents, and singular moments in personal history. The collection captures a fleeting but arresting glimpse of a man born in Goa, India, who migrated to the USA, entered the high realms of specialization in medicine, and refused to anaesthetize his own heart to the memories of his childhood and youth, the compelling faces of love, the power of a bull-fight in Spain, the mystery of Machu Picchu, the image of a dying war-child, the sights in the ICU, the blessings of friendship, the many-splendored dances of life and death. The distinctive art of Vamona Navelcar (Ganesh), adds a unique touch of magic to the evocative words of the medicine man.

An engaging read that explores independent documentary film in India as a site of resistance.

This book looks at how independent Indian documentary film reworks the relationship between film-makers, their narratives, their subjects and their audience, challenging the dominant idea of documentary as a discourse of the real. Based on close textual analysis, conversations with film-makers and drawing on Brecht's cinéma-vérité film-maker as a 'fly in the soup', this work explores the place of documentary within the Indian public sphere.

The Volume surveys the astonishing flowering of Indian Writing in English during the last two decades. After a brief but trenchant analysis of the milieu, it examines the literary productions in the genres of fiction poetry, drama and non-fictional prose. The range of this study is comprehensive, almost encyclopaedic, the style lively and jargon-free, and the critical enquiry perceptive and succinct, followed by an exhaustive bibliography of secondary sources.

The research work explores the issues of representation and identity of the indigenous Australians through an examination of the works of Bruce Pascoe, which are personal accounts that share knowledge, insight and emotion, each speaking of a deep connection to the native because of the harm that is being inflicted on it. The work discusses the portrayal of the indigenous people by colonial writers and the literary resistance offered by the indigenous writers.

Taslima Nasrin, a Bangladeshi writer and former physician, is a strong advocate of freedom of expression, human rights and gender equality. She shot into global fame with the publication of her famous novel Laiia (Shame), a bold venture which earned the wrath of her countrymen and other fundamentalist groups. Since 1984, she has been living in exile but has continued to work and write for the oppressed, especially women, with a firm commitment and dedication. The present book offers a critical study of her novels within the framework of contemporary feminist criticism. The book is a welcome addition to the corpus of South Asian Fiction, Women's Studies and Sociology.
