The LEKA (Lexical Knowledge Archive) Project involves language modernisation and modification through word formation/coinage, word blending and word borrowing which focuses on developing specialised terminology for Social Sciences and Humanities in the Iban language. This may look like an ordinary wordlist, a form of bilingual archive of specialised terminology in Social Sciences and Humanities, but for the authors this is our labour of love.

Bihar is one of the larger, more populous states in what is popularly known as the 'Hindi belt' of India. There is close contact between the languages of Bihar, West Bengal and Odisha as there has always been an intermingling of culture, language and literature among these states. This has significantly enhanced the linguistic diversity of Bihar. This volume of the People's Linguistic Survey of India, The Languages of Bihar (volume six, part two), discusses the Tribal, Scheduled and Non-Scheduled languages spoken in the state, with special emphasis on the tribal languages.

This research categorises the problems surrounding the halal vaccine under three main banners: legal and ethical issues, safety and manufacturing issues as well as social issues. In a nutshell, a wide range of legal, technical and social hurdles could stifle the enormous potentials of the halal vaccine initiative if they are not strategically addressed.

This collection provides readers with an overview of three themes that are within the frame of linguistic, literature and language learning studies. Irrespective of their own contexts, the chapters presented to highlight the overarching perspectives that mark the varied, yet substantiated horizons of research in Linguistics and English Language Studies. These possibilities flag the vast "frontier" that enfolds the fields chosen in the collection. The respective chapters on linguistics discuss the evolution of language use and the Internet by looking at strategies and appropriations in selected online media.

In the domain of literature teaching and learning as well as language learning, the constituent of the "frontier" is also quintessentially prominent. Alternative methodologies are garnered in order to present varied means of studying the ubiquitous challenges of teaching and learning literature as well as language learning. Efforts have been made to study self-determination among low achieving students, critical thinking and Spoken. Word Poetry among students studying literature and low achieving students' motivation in learning CERF English lessons. Knowledge is pivotal in order to enact change for the betterment of the teaching and learning processes experienced by educators and students in literature and also language learning. The analysis of the literary frontier exists within borders where different cultures, nations, ethnicity, and narratives, communicate and compete.

Therefore, the literary critic is notified in reading the texts to offer diverse reflections of the cultures, nations, and ethnicity. Researching the "frontier" in the spheres of Linguistics, Literature and Language Learning in this compilation thus unearths potential vistas to acquire new knowledge and to (re)interpret findings and innovations. The boundaries set in scoping the subject(s) investigated to reveal the ways linguistic diversity and language change can be studied in extending the frontiers of existing knowledge.

This is a compendium of 2,600 common English proverbs, idiomatic expressions and phrases and their comparable equivalents in Malay and Chinese proverbs. They are collectively dubbed as peribahasa in Malay, proverbs in English and in Chinese and commonly known as such.

As the root of some of these proverbs goes back to the infancy of English, Malay and Chinese civilizations developed independently in the far-flung three corners of the globe, this is also a journey of discovery and exploration on the many marvels of English, Malay and Chinese proverbs, including their meanings and role as a source of traditional wisdom and the development of their variants. Through this collection of proverbs, we can step back in time to many unique periods of English, Malay and Chinese history across the centuries. These thousands of proverbs are an impressive panorama of first-oral-then-written records of the local folks, expressed in , , , as well as among the Chinese and simpulan bahasa, bidalan, pepatah and perumpamaan among the Malays.

Essential Newari Phrasebook : A Self-taught Guide to Conversational Nepal
Bhasa / Tej R. Kansakar

Himalayan Book Centre, Kathmandu, Nepal 1989

$ 10.00 / null

Most foreigners who come to Nepal, either as tourists, specialists or scholars, will find that Newari is one of the principal languages spoken in the Kathmandu Valley and trading centers in various parts of the kingdom. Newari (earlier known as Nepal Bhasa) is one of four Tibeto-Burmese languages with an old written tradition. The earliest written records date back to the 12th century when the Nepal script (Bhujimol, Pracalit or Ranjana scripts) was used in stone or metal inscriptions, documents written on palm-leaves, and other miscellaneous media written on paper. Newari emerged as an influential literary language during the mid-fourteenth century when secular and religious texts were written or translated from Sanskrit, and many poems and dramas came to be composed. Since the advent of printing in the Kathmandu Valley around the beginning of this century, the original Newari scripts have been almost entirely abandoned and the language is now written in the Devanagari. The transcription scheme for words and phrases used in this booklet, however, is not a transliteration of the Devanagari. The materials used therefore do not presuppose familiarity with the Devanagari script, although some knowledge of the Devanagari alphabet would be an advantage in learning to read and write Newari sentences, and to consult bilingual Dictionaries where the entries are mainly in Devanagari. It must also be pointed out that the Devanagari has numerous variations in its spelling system which strictly are not relevant to the facts of Newari phonology. A more systematic approach to the learning of the Devanagari script can be found in Anna Maria Hari, Conversational Nepali, Kathmandu 1971.

Bahasa Sūg is the right name of the language spoken in Sūlū Archipelago and in other areas where Tausūgs and other Bangsa Sūg have settled away from the Motherland. In the Philippines, as the Bangsa Sūg nation has become a part, it is one of the recognized official languages. Often, many people call it Tausūg, but this term is more accurate if made to refer to the people, hence its use to mean the language is sadly improper, though nonetheless the sense is understood.

English Without Tears: Mind Your P's and Q's is a practical textbook that delves into the nitty gritty of the English language spoken in this contemporaneous global village. Jettisoned by its biological mother, the English Language has been adopted, appropriated, nurtured and made to bear the hallmarks of global Englishes. It is still the English language in full communion with its ancestral roots, but it is English that been panel beaten almost out of shape and endowed with the speech mannerisms, elocutionary patterns and phonetic peculiarities of the non-native. The goal of this book has been to shed ample light on some grammatical and lexical incongruities that often disfigure the speech of Anglophones whose mother tongue is not English. We are hopeful that this work would meet the dire needs of students and instructors of the English language all over the world. The substance in this book is easily digestible; our lexical choices are devoid of convoluted and our illustrations are down-to-earth. Ultimately, this book is our unapologetic contribution to the ongoing global Englishes revolution.
